cannot be carried. But that won't be in this bill, and guns can be carried there. And when Senator Combs now tries to carry out the will of the NRA, she's going to disappoint them, because she's not going to be able to get to the amendment that takes away from the cities the right they have right now to ban the carrying of concealed weapons. And I had made up in my mind that they're not going to be able to do that. They'll never get to that amendment. And if the bill is clotured, then it's just like a shot across the bow on the rest of the legislation, because we shouldn't get to this bill again. Or if we do, because it will be on Final Reading, there are other bills that won't make it that far. No, no, no, no, no. Let's say that we meet starting at 9:00, and we go until midnight. At 9:00 p.m. you all would be worn out by then, but just assume you can, you'll cover one bill, because you rubbed me the wrong way. And I'm going to see if you can wear me out. Even if you go hide in the senators' lounge and go to sleep, and lunch and dinner off the lobbyists, you all don't have my stamina. You can't do it. I feel like Jack Nicholson. The truth? You can't handle the truth. Stamina? You haven't got stamina. Why do you think various senators put food on the desk so you all can come across and eat it to keep your strength up? I don't need that. I lunch off you all! You all are what build up my energy level. As the day goes on and turns into early evening, then midnight, I come alive. I'm like Dracula. When the heavenly shades of night are falling and the day creatures are seeking their beds to go to sleep, that's when the night people are in full flower. And I'll say like that song this guy sang: She looked at me with them big brown eyes and she said, you ain't seen nothing yet. We're going to see just how the rest of this session goes, and staying till midnight isn't going to help you all, because you don't know how to work and effectively operate within the dynamics of the legislative process. So we're going to have the
